Art Unit 1713

35 U.S.C. § 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefore, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 7 and 13-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. These claims are directed to a "use". A use is not a statutory category of invention.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless --

(e) The invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under Section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

Art Unit 1713

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Tsuru et al., U.S. Patent 6,057,017. This patent shows modified polyolefins which are mixed with the instantly claimed stabilizer. See component (A) throughout this disclosure. The Examples appear to show a maleic anhydride modified polyolefin which is in fact mixed with this stabilizer. As such, applicants' claims are seen to be anticipated.

In the event that one of ordinary skill in the art would not immediately envisage each of applicants' instantly claimed limitations, the claims are seen to be prima facie obvious given that the prior art suggests to one of ordinary skill in the art that the claimed ingredients can be utilized in combination.

Claims 8-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tsuru as applied supra taken in view of Rutherford et al., U.S. Patent 4,542,162.

These process claims require that the modified polyolefin be mixed with the antioxidant in an extruder. The Tsuru patent prefers the utilization of a Hentschel mixer but is by no means limited to such a mixer. The Examiner maintains that it is prima facie obvious to use various mixers so as to obtain the mixed polymeric composition. The Rutherford et al. patent is cited as clearly showing the utilization of an extruder so as to mix a polymeric resin with designated non-reactive materials. The Examiner maintains that it would be prima facie obvious to utilize the extruder as a mixing device as shown in Rutherford wherein the Hentschel mixer is called for. It should be noted that obviousness does not require absolute predictability but rather a reasonable expectation of success. One of ordinary skill in the art would be motivated to mix the ingredients utilized in the extruder as shown in Rutherford given a reasonable expectation of success.

Art Unit 1713
